We very much oppose allowing ringless-voice-messaging. Our voice mailbox is a significant resource for our personal lives, including health and safety. To allow it to become cluttered with all the unwanted announcements, invitations and solicitations we already experience with our other means of communications would risk our ability to effectively receive messages important to our Voice-Messaginghealth and safety, e.g., medical report messages, prescription ready messages, appointment reminder messages, family messages, weather emergency messages, etc. We cannot always answer the phone, and our voice mailbox ensures that we do receive such important communications when we become available. But if they are hidden in the clutter of 50 unwanted messages for every wanted message then we will be harmed. We urge the FCC to not permit ringless-voice-messaging.
